

You can blame the West Point scholarship scandal—in which 90 cadets have been dismissed for cheating in examinations—on the egotism of the military-naval officer caste system. They operate their academies on the so-called honor system because these particular youngsters are supposed to be if not super-human at least something special.

But the honor system won't work. Among youngsters fighting to get a degree and start a career—any more than private business can operate without a system of checks and balances and auditors.

A generation ago someone dreamed up the idea that if left to their own devices students would turn in the cheaters voluntarily. The idea has developed a long and uniform history of disaster.

I saw the honor system at work myself in one of the best and toughest colleges in America, Oberlin, in Ohio. There the students did turn the cheaters over to the faculty for punishment and expulsion. But it was incredibly hard to do—and finally Oberlin dropped the student monitor system for faculty supervision of exams.

I feel Oberlin did the wise thing. West Point would have been a lot better off had it abandoned its own silly pretenses long ago.

If grown men have to be surrounded by checks and balances and auditors to keep 'em in the groove, how do you expect students to be otherwise? Certainly the business of completing his education is as important to a student as making money is to his father; and the rules by which both are acquired are hard and fixed—there's nothing truly voluntary about 'em.

New Building Order Frees Small Deals

Philadelphia, Aug. 3 — (AP) — A new building controls order, freeing many smaller projects from the necessity of seeking permission for materials, was announced today by the U. S. commerce department. The order, however, tightens controls over large building projects which necessarily require larger amounts of critical materials.

Announcement of the order was made by the regional office here. The commerce department scheduled a news conference in Washington on the subject this afternoon, explaining that a printing delay had upset plans to make the announcement there this morning. The new order was issued by the national production authority, NPA which has control over materials in which shortages have or may develop during the defense program. NPA revoked its former regulation M4, and replaced it with a new one designated as order M-4A.

The new regulations, while allowing a system of self-authorization for small amounts of critical materials place all construction under NPA's controlled materials plan beginning with the fourth quarter of this year. Previously owners and builders could, if they so desired, apply to NPA for construction materials, but they were not required to do so. Failure to obtain certificates, however, left such owners or builders to their own resources in obtaining materials in short supply.

Under the general terms of the new order, no construction requiring the use of more than two tons of carbon steel, 200 pounds of aluminum, alloy steel, or stainless steel may be started without authorization and a allotment of materials.

Investigation of West Point Scandal Looms

Washington, Aug. 4 — (AP) — The dismissal of 90 West Point cadets for cheating in exams brought demands today for congressional investigation of the military academy — including its football activities.

Senator Cough RND urged congress to probe the possibility that over-emphasis on football led to the breakdown in the academy's famed honor system.

Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff, reportedly blamed such over-emphasis yesterday in telling lawmakers of the mass dismissals, largest in the academy's 149 year history. Senators said he hinted that a majority of the academy's game-winning football players cheated on exams because football practice cut down their opportunities to study.

Would Swap Visitors for U. S., Russia

Washington, Aug. 3 — (AP) — Senator McMahon D-Conn has proposed an exchange of visitors between Russia and the United States; a congressional delegation for the 14 members of the Soviet politburo.

The congressman, McMahon told the senate yesterday, could tell the Russian people "about the peaceful and friendly desires" of the American people.

And the Soviet leaders "could x x x decide for themselves whether or the American people want peace or war."

McMahon set forth the suggestions in a senate speech late yesterday. He said he would like to see congress approve resolutions endorsing both of the trips he proposed.

The Connecticut Senator told a reporter today he wants to discuss the matter with some of his colleagues before deciding whether to sponsor such legislation.

"I tossed out an idea," he said. "Let's wait a bit and see what happens."

McMahon indicated, however, that he would be perhaps the most surprised man in America if Stalin and company said come ahead and we'll be over to see you, too.

His lack of optimism was pointed up by a round of sharp criticism he fired at Soviet leaders for failing to publish in Russia a resolution, already approved by congress, expressing American friendship for the people of Russia.

"By refusing to publish this expression of friendship by the American congress, the Soviet has committed a crime against peace," declared McMahon, chief sponsor of the resolution. "The Kremlin crowd are now self-confessed war mongers."

He added that the Red leaders "have now shown to the world that they are mortally afraid the Russian people will catch on to their deception and double-dealing—that the Russian people may learn that peace is possible when ever the politburo wants peace."

Put Your Dreams Down on Paper and Maybe Then They Will Come True — It's Idea

By RELMAN MRIN For Hal Boyle

New York, Aug. 4 — (AP) — Did you ever keep a diary of your dreams? The real ones, that is, not day-dreams.

Sometimes they come true, or seem to.

An English scientist, struck by his own experiences in that field, ran a check on his dreams some years ago. He simply kept a notebook on the night-table, and whenever he remembered a dream he set it down on paper and put a date to the entry. The fact of recording the dream helped, of course, to fix it in his memory.

And he discovered that it was impossible to record every detail, whenever small, meaningless, or outlandish it appeared to be.

He claimed that the account showed, in due course, some of the dreams were later duplicated in actual experience. They came true.

To amplify the evidence, he enlisted some of his friends in the experiment. They logged their dreams over a period of a year or more. Their experiences, he said, were the same as his. Finally he wrote a book and called it "an experiment with time."

I hadn't thought about the book in many years until the other night in a theatre. Suddenly, the scene seemed intensely familiar, the players, the acting and the atmosphere. And I knew, before they were spoken, what the next four or five lines of dialogue would contain. They did, word for word.

This sort of experience, of course, is extremely common. Most people have encountered it. You are sitting in a room, and suddenly the people, a movement, the topic of conversation seem to fall into a particular pattern. You seem to recognize it. From somewhere beyond consciousness a eerie, haunting sensation, a this-has-happened before feeling, sweeps over you.

The English scientist would tell you that it did happen before. You dreamed that experience one night, and at some later date — months or even years later — it took place exactly.

The records of parapsychology and psychic research are crammed with stories of dreams that later took place, in detail, in actual events. Many have been investigated and documented by careful researchers. A rational explanation seems not to be available in every case.

The one that intrigues me is the story — allegedly proved true — of a dream that two people shared at the same time.

Two men, good friends, were occupying the same cabin on an ocean liner bound for New York. Crossing the North Atlantic, the ship ran into a gale so heavy that the news of it was reported in the New York newspapers. Next morning during the voyage, one of the men said:

"Had a queer dream last night. It was about your wife. I dreamed that she came into the cabin and stood for a moment, staring at you. She seemed terribly worried. . . didn't say anything. . . just looked at you and then went out."

When the ship reached port, the woman met her husband on the dock. She asked about the storm. She said she had read about them and knowing his ship was caught in them, had been extremely anxious for his safety. She added: "I had the most vivid dream, one night, about coming into your cabin. You seemed to be sound asleep, storm or no storm. I suppose it was all because I was so worried."

Then, oddly enough, she described the cabin accurately, although she had never seen it. Comparing notes, it developed that the two dreams occurred on the same night — or the two parts of the same dream.

Assuming the English scientist's theory is correct — that some dreams are "previews" of real experiences — you encounter an interesting question:

Is everything fixed and foreordained? If a dream is a glimpse into the future, does it mean that what you saw will surely happen later?

Well, in some cases, I'd like to think so. Others can be put down to sardine sandwiches after midnight.

Would Abolish Football for Army, Navy

— Says Fulbright

Washington, Aug. 4 — (UP) — Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark) proposed today that the Army and Navy abolish intercollegiate football as a result of the cheating scandal at West Point.

Congressmen, army officers and government officials from President Truman down to the lowest officeholder in this usually cynical city were stunned and dismayed at the mass violation of West Point's 103-year-old honor system.

They all asked the same question: What prompted the youths to violate the academy's proud regulations against cheating in examinations?

There were many explanations, including general deterioration of teenage morals, the effect of corruption and graft among government officials, national cynicism about honesty, and the effect of "too soft living" by the American people.

But Sen. Fulbright, noting that many of the Cadets involved in the scandal were football players, suggested that commercialization of Army and Navy football teams may have been the cause.

"I guess that this violation of the honor code was first instigated by Cadets who were primarily interested in playing football and were not there for any other purpose," Fulbright said.

The senator, a one-time football star himself and a long-time foe of commercialized intercollegiate sports, said that the military academies to quit intercollegiate football.

"I think that perhaps is the proper thing for them to do," he said. "This would not do away with sports — they could still have their intra-mural games."

Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff, said that a sweeping investigation of all West Point athletes is underway as a result of the mass expulsion that all but "wiped out" the army grid team.

The White House said Mr. Truman was "naturally very much concerned." It said the President approved of the dismissal action.

Lawmakers, whose selections make up a large portion of West Point's student body, were shocked and grieved. They forgot politics for the moment and discussed the development gravely and sadly.

Gen. G. M. Gillette (D-Ia) called the scandal a real tragedy.

Rep. Clyde Doyle (D-Cal), proposed that the house armed services committee and the congressional board of visitors to the military academy conduct a joint inquiry into the case.

Doyle, a member of the congressional board of visitors to the academy, was concerned because he was at West Point two months ago "and specifically asked if there was any indication of classroom cheating. The instructors assured me there was not," he said.

But Rep. Overton Brooks (D-La) acting chairman of the committee, favored a "go-slow" attitude. He noted that a thorough investigation already has been conducted by the army.

Brooks added, however, that the nation is entitled to know that the academy has been "cleaned from top to bottom of all moral dishonesty."

A. P. & L. Gets Pipe for Line to Big Plant

Little Rock, Aug. 4 — (AP) — The Arkansas Power and Light Company has the authority to use 12 3/4 inch pipe in the construction of a natural gas line to its Hamilton Moses steam power plant near Palestine, Ark.

The Arkansas public service commission okayed the use of the pipe in an order handed down yesterday. However, the commissioners were divided on the matter.

Chairman Scott Wood and Commissioner Howard Gladden approved A. P. & L.'s request to substitute 12 3/4 inch pipe for 18-inch pipe in construction of the 40-mile line from near Helena, Ark.

Commissioner John R. Thompson dissented. He said the utility installed 12 3/4 inch pipe without authority as the commission's original order, authorizing the project, called for 18-inch pipe.

Thompson wrote that A. P. & L. has asked the commission for authority to approve something it was doing wrongly.

He added that the utility probably would need larger capacity lines by 1957. Thompson suggested that $50,000 estimated cost to lay additional pipe should larger lines be needed be held from the rate base of the company until the capacity of the line is increased to its original size.

The majority opinion said the change was necessary because the larger pipe was not available.

Cliff Dweller Threatens to Kill Rescuers

Durango, Colo., Aug. 3 — (AP) — Will a 56 year old prospector from Oregon shoot his favorite daughter if she approaches the cliff on which he's perched 22 miles northwest of here?

That was the big question today as authorities sought a way to carry out his written threats to fire on anyone approaching too close to the 250-foot cliff.

The daughter, Mrs. Charlene Smith of San Diego, Calif., arrived here last night and is willing and anxious to try to talk to her father.

Sheriff Chester Petty planned to take the 18 year old Mrs. Smith into the really rough cut mountain country sometime today in hope her father will let them get close enough to talk to him. "They don't want him to use the .38-calibre pistol with which he is believed to be armed."

Conveniently left notes reporting that he was going into the mountains of southwestern Colorado and warning everyone to stay away. They were found Tuesday by his brother, Norman of Durango.

Norman went into the country mentioned in the notes and talked across a canyon to his brother. But Millard refused Norman's pleas for him to return to Durango.

After remaining until Tuesday midnight at a camp they used for gold and silver prospecting, Norman returned to Durango and reported to Sheriff Petty. They went to the campsite Wednesday.

They were unsuccessful in attempting to contact Millard Carmichael when the sheriff fired his pistol in the air there was an answering shot. Petty didn't think Carmichael was shooting at him and his brother.

"They left enough food to last until today and stayed away yesterday to give 'Carmichael time to think things over.'"

The sheriff said Carmichael's actions apparently are due to despondency. Relatives reported that he appeared to be despondent at times. But, his sister-in-law, Mrs. Norman Carmichael, said he also is "the nicest but anyone could ever meet."

M. Faulkner, Hope, Held for Illinois Death

Morris, Ill., Aug. 4 — (AP) — Marcus Faulkner, 46, of Hope, Ark., was being held for the Grand county grand jury today on a charge of murdering a fellow worker from Kansas City, Mo.

He was ordered held for grand jury action by Justice of the Peace George Dix.

Faulkner is accused of fatally stabbing Lawrence Gragg, 35, of Kansas City, during a brawl at Morris July 28.

Faulkner claimed he acted in self-defense.

He is also accused of assault with intent to kill another fellow worker, Walter Mekkeson of Springfield, Ill.

The three were members of a Rock Island railroad section crew. Sheriff James Bell said the violence flared after a payday round of drinking and gambling by the three men.

Sky Pilot Makes Forced Landing in Hill Country

Heber Springs, Aug. 4 — (AP) — A young Church of God minister, flying a snow-white plane from Missouri to Jonesboro, Ark., got off course and made a safe forced landing in the hill country near here yesterday.

An intensive search was under way in northeast Arkansas for the pilot, 27-year-old Leroy Fields of Kansas City.

Fields was alone, said he was forced to land his plane when his supply of gas became low. Inability to reach a telephone delayed notification of his whereabouts. He was not hurt. He reported the landing gear of his ship was damaged.

He was reported missing soon after leaving Willow Springs, Mo., en route to Jonesboro. He was to attend a church convention at Trumann, Ark.

Fields' plane was one of three which left Kansas City Wednesday. The ships are owned by the Church of God. The other two ships landed at Jonesboro safely.

The majority opinion said the change was necessary because the larger pipe was not available.

17 Violent Deaths in Arkansas So Far This Week

By The Associated Press

At least 17 persons have died violently in Arkansas this week. The 17th victim was Riley Lee, about 35, of Palestine, Ark. He was injured fatally in the collision of two trucks near Atkins Friday.

Traffic mishaps have caused five of the 17 deaths. Three persons drowned, two were killed by trains, two died in plane crashes, three deaths were suicides, one person died in an industrial mishap and there was one electrocution.

A sudden gust of wind whipped dust across U. S. highway 24 Thursday, causing a car to crash into one ahead of it. The second car plummeted into the path of a third one.

The three drivers, unhurt, crawled out of their demolished machines and recognized each other. They were Rachel Duell, Alvin Middleton and Bruce Pyles all cousins.

Professor Kills Self to Escape Law

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug. 4 — (AP) — A world famous scientist, threatened with prosecution for mishandling University of Michigan funds, killed himself with a hypodermic dose of snake venom and morphine late yesterday.

Three hours before his suicide, scholarly, handsome Dr. Malcolm H. Soule, a bacteriologist, was told by university regents he had been fired and would be prosecuted.

The Washington county prosecutor's office called a conference today to decide whether to go on with an inquiry into the way the scientist handled department of bacteriology funds. Dr. Soule, 54, had been chairman of the department since 1935.

The regents told Dr. Soule at 3 p. m. they would not accept his resignation submitted last July 12. The prosecutor's office was asked at 4:30 p. m. to begin an investigation.

About 6 p. m. Dr. Soule's wife, Alma, found him dying in the basement of their home. He had given himself the fatal injection. In virtually his last conscious breath he told his wife it was useless to call for help.

Chief Assistant Prosecutor Edmond De Vine pointed out the suicide precluded any prosecution. He added it was to be decided whether to proceed with an official investigation of department funds.

On the record, apparently only $487.05 was involved.

The recent said Dr. Soule had made full restitution. They declined to say how the funds were mishandled or how the incident came to light. Immediately after announcement of his dismissal, Dr. Soule had declined to make any comment to newsmen.

Mrs. Soule gave Detective Duane Bauer of the Ann Arbor police department this account of the suicide:

About 5:45 p. m. her husband went to the basement of their fashionable home at 2110 Hill street after asking her when dinner would be ready. She said in about 20 minutes.

She found her husband prostrate at the foot of the stairway.

Still conscious, he told her he had injected snake venom and morphine into his veins.

"It won't do any good to call physicians," he whispered. "There is no known antidote for this snake venom."

Then he lapsed into unconsciousness.

Tropic Storm Is Brewing Off Miami

Miami, Fla., Aug. 3 — (UP) — A small tropical storm with winds about 50 miles an hour in intensity was found today in the Atlantic, about 500 miles southeast of Bermuda.

The federal storm warning service here said that at 10 a. m. the storm was centered near latitude 27.2 north and longitude 58.2 west.

The weather bureau said winds were apparently increasing and "caution was advised."

The bureau said the storm was moving northwestward about 18 miles per hour. Strongest winds were reported in the northern semi-circle of the storm.

The advisory said the storm should pass near or a little east of Bermuda late Saturday. Present position would put the storm about 1,400 miles from Miami and straight east of Fort Pierce, Fla.

The storm sometimes grows longer than 12 feet.

3,000 State Guardsmen en Route to Camp

Little Rock, Aug. 4 — (AP) — More than 3,000 Arkansas national guardsmen moved to Camp Polk, La., by truck and train today and tomorrow for their annual two-week encampment.

The guardsmen are members of the 50th division, composed of Arkansas and Louisiana troops, which will train at Polk from tomorrow to Aug. 19. For the first time since postwar reorganization the entire division this year will participate as a unit in a field training problem.

Maj. Ernest McDaniel, operations officer for the Arkansas guard, said that all truck elements left Arkansas points this morning. All artillery is moving by truck.

The truck convoys will bivouac overnight at El Dorado, Texarkana and Ruston, La., and proceed to Polk tomorrow.

Some elements traveling by train will leave as early as 7 p. m. today. Others won't leave until Arkansas stations until after daylight tomorrow. There'll be five special trains, which will be combined into two trains near Texarkana. Slightly more than half the guardsmen will travel by train.

An advance detachment of 20 officers and 177 enlisted men left Thursday to help prepare the campsite area. The detachment was commanded by Col. Alton F. Balkman, assistant U. S. property and disbursing officer for Arkansas.

Ninety-five men from Arkansas have been at a cook school at Polk for the past two weeks.

Major Arkansas units of the 50th division include the 153rd infantry regiment, commanded by Col. Lucien Abraham of Batesville; the division field artillery, composed of the 437th and 455th battalions and commanded by Brig. Gen. John B. Webb of Little Rock; the 200th tank battalion, the 217th ordnance battalion, the division finance company and the division military police company.

Brig. Gen. John B. Morris, Arkansas adjutant general, who has been in Washington, was expected to return here today before going to Camp Polk.

The 50th division is commanded by Maj. Gen. Raymond H. Klaming, assistant division commander. He is Brig. Gen. Joseph Redding. Both are from Louisiana.

Bob Blaik Criticizes Academy Purge

West Point N. Y., Aug. 4 — (UP) — Bob Blaik star quarterback on the team and son of West Point head football coach bitterly criticized the United States military academy today for the manner in which it ousted 90 cadets for "cribbing" in examinations.

Young Blaik declined to say whether he was one of the Cadets involved in the biggest academic scandal of West Point's 160 years. However he used the word "we" when discussing the ousted cadets.

Surrounded by admitted members of the 90-man ousted group, Blaik told newsmen:

"We were not allowed to notify our parents all over the country in advance. First notice they got was from the newspaper and over the radio."

Coach Earl H. Blaik added reporters for nearly 40 hours and when finally tracked down and asked for comment said:

"No."

One of the 90 Cadets involved, who like the others declined to reveal his name told newsmen:

"At least 200 corps cadets had the same thing."

He said the ousted cadets admitted the cheating when they were questioned about it. He said they equally guilty denied under any complicity.

One member of the group pointed to the speaker and said: "I'd rather have these fellows tell the truth than have them lie about the cheating but even so."

Still another irate cadet said that to his knowledge "hundreds" members of the graduating class were involved in the cheating but even so.

One boy in the group said: "We want legal advice. Another added: 'We are going to demand orable discharges.'"

One of the Cadets said the spread academic cheating has been going on as long as the academy and still another cadet said the scandal had its roots back as 12 years ago.

Newsmen stopped asking as he was selected to speak. As they talked, a crowd of students gathered and without one another said: "We were among the 90."

Attempt to Straighten Purchase Jam

Little Rock, Aug. 4.—The Arkansas legislative council has been asked to straighten out the muddle over state purchasing.

Pulaski Rep. Joel Y. Leubetter submitted a resolution to the council yesterday asking that a study be made of purchasing laws of other states. He wants the council to draft or recommend a law to establish a central purchasing system for the state.

The controversy over state buying started soon after the 1951 legislature approved a measure, which the McMath administration said, would simplify existing regulations.

Opponents of the act—act 242 of 1951—contend the measure is too liberal. Petitions have been filed to refer it to a vote in the next general election. However, Governor McMath and his assistants have announced they will file a lawsuit attacking validity of some of the signatures on the petitions.

Meanwhile, state purchasing is regulated by act 241 of 1943, which state purchasing act of a ruling by Atty. Gen. Lee Murry. Murry said the act prohibits any state employee or board of commission members from doing business with the state.

Act 242 would confer this by permitting employees or board members in private business to sell to departments other than the ones with which they are connected.

Other matters which the council will consider at its meeting Aug. 10 include: Discussion of the proposed statewide public school survey. Two firms, Griffin Hagen Associates and J. L. Jacobs co., of Chicago, are interested in making the survey. Representatives will appear before the council at the meeting.

Investigation

Academy football team will play its fall schedule.

"An investigation is in order and should also cover too much luxury in conducting examinations," Young told a reporter. Young is a member of the official congressional board of visitors which inspects the academy every year.

Army sources said no faculty members at West Point were involved. No congressman publicly criticized the mass dismissal as too severe.

But one lawmaker, who would not permit use of his name, said: "There would not be many football players in my state university, or as far as that goes, many students. If every person who enrolled in an exam was dismissed."

The dismissed cadets were accused of either giving or accepting outside help in a mass of examination tests during the past few years. Senators said they were told 80 of the cadets had admitted breaking the honor code and that the others probably would face a court martial or special trial to determine the guilt.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. M. M. McClellan, formerly of Washington, D. C., has accepted a position in Philadelphia, Pa.

SAM COLTON dropped his automobile. The automobile moved nearer and Johnnie McAdams stood close behind him. "Turn over the will, Sam."

Sam laughed. "There's no will, Johnnie. I knew you'd followed me here, so I talked for your benefit just to get you to show your hand to Paul Baker here—the county prosecutor."

McAdams swore, then lifted his hand and brought the gun it retained down on Sam's head. The man dropped in his tracks and lay there. As her father fell, Pat Colton clutched Baker's arm.

McAdams came close to Baker's coupe now, the gun in his hand leveled steadily.

"Sam didn't accomplish much," he said. "But I'm glad I came along to see what he was up to. I never dreamed you'd come here with Pat. I thought you'd have had occasion to reach into the glove compartment by now. Do you know what's in there, Pat?"

"I'll give you one guess. Sure. The mate to the Gila Monster that got poor Laura by the hand. I put it there this evening. I also loosened a valve in one of your tires. I thought it would go flat tonight and you'd need the flashlight in your glove box. I figured the odds were the monster would hang on till you were dead, especially if you had the flat in a deserted place."

"You figured optimistically, Johnnie. Why did you think it necessary to eliminate me?"

"Because you'd guess my motive for killing Laura as soon as you found out about the new will she meant to sign. I visited your office today to convince you that the old will represented Laura's last wishes. You'd never have learned that if you hadn't tricked me with that story about two kids seeing me at Laura's car. I had to tell about the new will then—it was the only story Pat, her brother and her father would believe."

"But it wasn't a will you left in the glove box. It was the Gila Monster."

McAdams chuckled. "Sure. You didn't think I was going to kiss a hundred and eighty grand goodby, did you?"

"Why not? That would be chicken feed compared to the bonanza you'd get if you married Pat."

"Mc marry Johnnie?" Pat exploded. "Having to date him was the worst ordeal mother ever inflicted on me!"

McAdams laughed bitterly. "I know the score with Pat. I had to get mine in executor and attorney fees."

"How did you find out about the Gila Monster, Johnnie?"

"Lawrence brought me out here one time and showed them off."

"Where is he now, Johnnie?"

"Tied up inside. He never knew what hit him. I'm keeping him quiet with chloroform. When he comes to, he'll think his old man cooked him. His old man won't be able to deny it because he's going to suicide with his own gun."

"What about Pat and me, Johnnie?"

"You'll both be taken care of when Pat opens the glove box and lets the monster out. If he doesn't kill both of you, it will make you unconscious and more of my chloroform will. I don't think the coroner will be looking for chloroform when he finds the monster's got to you."

Pat stiffened at Baker's side. McAdams said: "Open the glove box door, Pat. It won't be pleasant, but if you don't, I'll blow Baker's head off. You wouldn't like that, would you, Pat?"

Baker felt the pressure of Pat's fingers on his wrist.

"I'll have to open it," she said. "He waited no longer. With his left hand he lifted the car door catch and lunged against the door. It burst outward, slamming McAdams backward. The gun in his hand went off, but the bullet went high, grazing Baker's head and tearing through the roof. In a continuous movement, Baker went on after the reeling man.

The gun barrel raked his face. He grabbed at it, missed, then concentrated on punches to McAdams' midriff. McAdams wasn't thinking about using the gun then save to ward off the blows. He seemed to realize that in-fighting could do him no good, and he faded back, lifting the gun as he did so. Baker threw himself toward the still inert body of Sam Colton and tried desperately to feel for Sam's gun on the ground. He failed.

The roar and flash of McAdams' gun blinded and deafened him, but he was rolling, and the bullet went wild. Then his hand found Sam Colton's automatic. His fingers grasped it; he lifted and fired at the spot whence the flash had come. He knew he had missed, but the shot had taken the corner of McAdams' head. Instead of running to his own car, he jumped under the wheel of Baker's coupe. Baker thought of Pat, and he shouted:

"Get out, Pat! Get out!"

HE could not see whether she obeyed or not as the coupe was turned about. Then McAdams tried to run over him as he roared away, but he rolled in time and managed to clear the wheels.

"I'm here," Pat's voice called back. He ran to her, found her behind some bushes, where her brother's car was hidden.

"Are you all right? You weren't hit?"

"No. What about Johnnie?"

"He took my car. He must have left his own at the highway. He'll change cars, but he won't get far."

Pat shook her head. "He may not even get to his own car. You see, before I leaped out of your coupe I opened the glove box door. The lizard's loose in it with Johnnie."

As she spoke there was a screeching sound of tires and then the crash of metal as if a car were turning over and over.

DOROTHY DIX

Books Or Parties?

Dear Miss Dix: What is more important in college? (1) Getting by on rather low grades and being able to keep up with the gang or (2) getting much out of the studies and not being considered one of the group.

DAISY

Answer: Now I'll ask you a question! Just what are you trying to get out of college? Are you studying for a profession, for the business world or are you just out to waste four years—and your parents' money?

You Can Do Both
Of course, the ideal solution is a middle course—get good grades and have fun! While I have tremendous admiration for scholars and those who work to get the most out of every opportunity, I can also see the need for relaxation and recreation.

Books First

If you are incapable of handling both ends of the candle, I suggest the books. Good times will come later but the time for learning is now! Plugging away at your books for four years may seem a dreary prospect, but you'll be able to sand with some fun. If the group you want to emulate seeks nothing but a good time at the expense of all the knowledge college can give them, they really aren't worth your regard. If you just want gaily why make your parents spend their good money on a college education?

Learning itself can be fun, and will give you an appreciation of life that will enhance all your days.

Hot Springs Ball Club Is on Market

Hot Springs, Aug. 4 —(AP)— Negotiations for sale of the Hot Springs Baseball club of the Class C Cotton States league — for the second time this year — are under way. If the deal is completed, the club will continue to be owned locally.

This was announced today by Henry Britt, president of the Hot Springs Junior Chamber of Commerce, which owns controlling interest in the club.

He said sale of Jaycee's 200
shares of stock to A. G. Cabel Crawford, owner of a Hot Springs drug store chain, and his business associate, Tom Stough, probably could be completed next Tuesday or Wednesday.

The price for exchange of this stock was reported unofficially to be $7,000.

There are about 60 other stockholders, all Hot Springs residents.
They will retain their stock, Britt said.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce bought controlling interest in the club earlier this year from Herbert Anderson of Memphis.

The club reportedly is deeply indebted. Anderson said he lost $10,- 000 operating it last season.

Outside Is in Lead in Tam O'Shanter

Chicago, Aug. 4 —(AP)— Deflating
the circus-like atmosphere at Tam O'Shanter, a guy named John Barnum who doesn't know Bailey today tried to protect his halfway lead in the $15,000 All-American pro golf tournament.

For the first time in the 11 year history of Promoter George S.
May's blue plate special of golf, Barnum became the only rank outsider to maintain a lead in the big-name field through 36 holes.

He showed signs of slipping yesterday when his trusty putter that had carved an opening round 64, eight under par, failed and he soared to 74 for 138. But the personable, 220-pound Grand Rapids, Mich., pro of four years standing was surprised to see this figure bear up for the 36-hole lead.

Today, the 39-year-old Barnum was ready to fight off the challenges of Fred Hawkins, El Paso,
Tex.; Low Worsham, of Oakmont, Pa., the 1947 National Open champion; Ted Kroll, four-time Purple Heart veteran from New Hartford, N. Y.; and Al Bessieck, infant, 28-year-old pro from Mt.
Clemens, Mich.

Each was bracketed at 139
white four seasoned pros followed at 140. They were Lawson Little,
Tommy Bolt of Durham, N. C., Garry Middlecoff and Lloyd Matgram. Grouped at 141 were such fancy duns as Jimmy Demaret, Jim Ferrier and Skeet Riegel.

In the concurrent All-American men's amateur meet, Frank Stranhan, defending champion, held a seven stroke lead with 139 over Harold Foreman of Chicago, the 1951 Illinois state winner.

ahead of Beverly Hanson, Pasadena, Calif., in the women's section with a halfway total of 152,

Scandal Folds Army's Grid Powerhouse

New York, Aug. 4 —(AP)— Army will field a football team this fall.
That much seems certain.

But whether it'll resemble the power houses of recent years is a question that Coach Earl Blaik himself probably can't answer until he surveys what is left of a squad ruined by dismissals for cheating on examinations.

Ninety unidentified cadets were expelled yesterday for cribbing and Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff, said no names would be announced.
